Education

Peller's independent development has been influenced by private affiliation and study with individual artists. Initially, he studied with Canadian artist A.K. Scott, a pupil of the distinguished American painters Charles W. Hawthorne, and George Bellows. During formal study at the School of Architecture at the University of Toronto, he maintained a private liaison with Canadian artists Kenneth Forbes and Cleve Horne. His development continued in New York working with noted artists Thomas Fogarty Jr., and Hilary Holmes at the Art Students League, and Ron Sherr at the National Academy of Design. He received a Revson Foundation Grant from the Art Students League of New York.
